Bailey and Adkins Will Fight It Out in the Gubernatorial Race

The Man of "Out Our Way"

The Swede Is Boasting

Kill the Cow

"Out Our Way," cartoon which The Star introduced in this territory 11½ years ago, is the subject of a special article in Time magazine. Time finds "Out Our Way" fascinating because J. R. Williams, the Arizona rancher who draws it, is a fascinating character himself.

Of the cartoon itself, Time says: "Its homely humanity, bleak realism, and salty, Mark Twainish humor have attracted the attention of Americana-collecting high-brows, have earned for its author the title 'Will Rogers of the Comic Strip.'"

You learn some astonishing things about Mr. Williams. He rides his 45,000-acre ranch near Prescott, Arizona, dressed in the old blue jeans and riding boots of a cowboy, hasn't been to a big city in 10 years—and mails all his cartoons "copy" to the NEA syndicate office in Cleveland.

I don't think Time mentions Mr. Williams' salary, but the last income tax publication put it at $36,000 a year. NEA can afford to pay him that, for his cartoon runs in 725 newspapers.

Time's finest tribute to Mr. Williams is this:

"One thing that surprises most people about Jim Williams' cartoons is the scope of their subject matter. He can draw a machine-shop scene one day, a cattle ranch the next, then a small-town home of the early 1900's, and get all his details right, make his characters true to life in each environment."

Reason: Jim Williams has, at one time or another, lived or known all his characters himself."

Nels Holmes, 40, Chicago's self-styled Vagabond Swede, stopped by The Star office Tuesday on a motor-scooter tour which he says has carried him to most of the state capitals and to Mexico City. He's on his way to Little Rock.

I'm not being contentious about the Vagabond Swede's travels, and he'll probably make Little Rock all right—but any time his one-and-a-half horsepower scooter climbs the mountains of Mexico I want something more than the Swede's word for it.

The Swede says he is a philosopher. Says he:

"I am on a strict vegetable diet. A meat diet makes people hot-headed and helps create war."

He's mistaken. He's no philosopher. He's a fanatic.

When people have no meat, one of two things happens: Either they get mad and go to war, like Germany; or, like the rice-eating Chinese, they let the world stomache them to death.

Any man has the right to be a strict vegetarian if he wants to, but he ought to be careful about imagining that it has any effect on either himself or other folks.

Hornee Greeley, great editor of the New York Tribune in the era before and during the War Between the States, was a strict vegetarian, preached on the value of bran muffins, etc.

Horace Greeley was war-like and profane and his terrible penmanship drove the Tribune printers crazy.

So, all that vegetarianism proved about Greeley was—that he was a newspaper editor.

And this Swede is just a guy riding a motor-scooter who says the dern thing climbed the mountains of Mexico.

Please pass the steak.

Arkansas Primary Ticket Closes; 3rd Congress Aspirant

M. W. Greeson, Prescott, to Run With Kitchens, Harris

M'CLELLAN IS OUT

Indicates Race for Senate Later, Not for Governor

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The ticket for the August Democratic primary elections closed at noon Wednesday with four candidates for governor formally entered.

Qualifying to make the race were: Gov. Carl Bailey and Homer Adkins, Little Rock, Frank B. Whittle of Magnolia, and J. Rosser Venable, Little Rock.

The field of the governor's race will be swelled to five if the Democratic state committee at its meeting in June votes to authorize Dr. Walter S. McNutt, Arkadelphia, to run.

State Auditor J. Oscar Humphrey is the only constitutional state officer to go on the ticket without opposition. A. W. Smith, Harrison, qualified as a candidate for attorney general; Walter Riddick, Little Rock, for national committeeman; and M. W. Greeson, Prescott, for congress, in the Seventh district.

Three in Congress Race

Entrance of M. W. Greeson, Prescott, in the Seventh district congressional race, will make it a three-cornered fight. Wade Kitchens, Magnolia, incumbent, is a candidate for re-election, opposed by Oren Harris, El Dorado, prosecuting attorney of the 13th judicial district.

McClellan Is Out

LITTLE ROCK—Former Congressman John L. McClellan of Camden will not run for governor this summer.

His decision, announced in a prepared statement Tuesday night, prevented Governor Bailey and Internal Revenue Collector Homer M. Adkins to the campaign as major candidates for the Democratic nomination.

Mr. McClellan came to Little Rock to issue his statement. He held several long distance telephone conferences from his room at the Frederica hotel and at 7 p. m. called in newspaper men.

His statement was written in long hand. It began:

"I will not be a candidate for governor."

To reporters who asked whether he would support Governor Bailey or Mr. Adkins he replied:

"I will wait, watch developments, hear the issues discussed and undertake, as every good citizen will, to support the candidate who I am convinced will best serve the state during this emergency."

Elmore Supply Co. Opens, Elm Street

Former Magnolia Man Opens Local Supply House

The Elmore Auto Supply company, 210 South Elm street, announced Wednesday it is open for business in its Hope quarters with a complete stock of auto accessories, tires, batteries, and bicycles and radios.

The Elmore company is owned by Bob Elmore, son of Dr. A. B. Elmore, Magnolia. Mr. Elmore was born and educated at Magnolia, moved to Little Rock to study law and accounting, and entered the banking business.

He went with the Peoples National bank and for the last five years was with the Little Rock branch of the St. Louis Federal Reserve bank—leaving the latter position to move to Hope and enter business for himself.

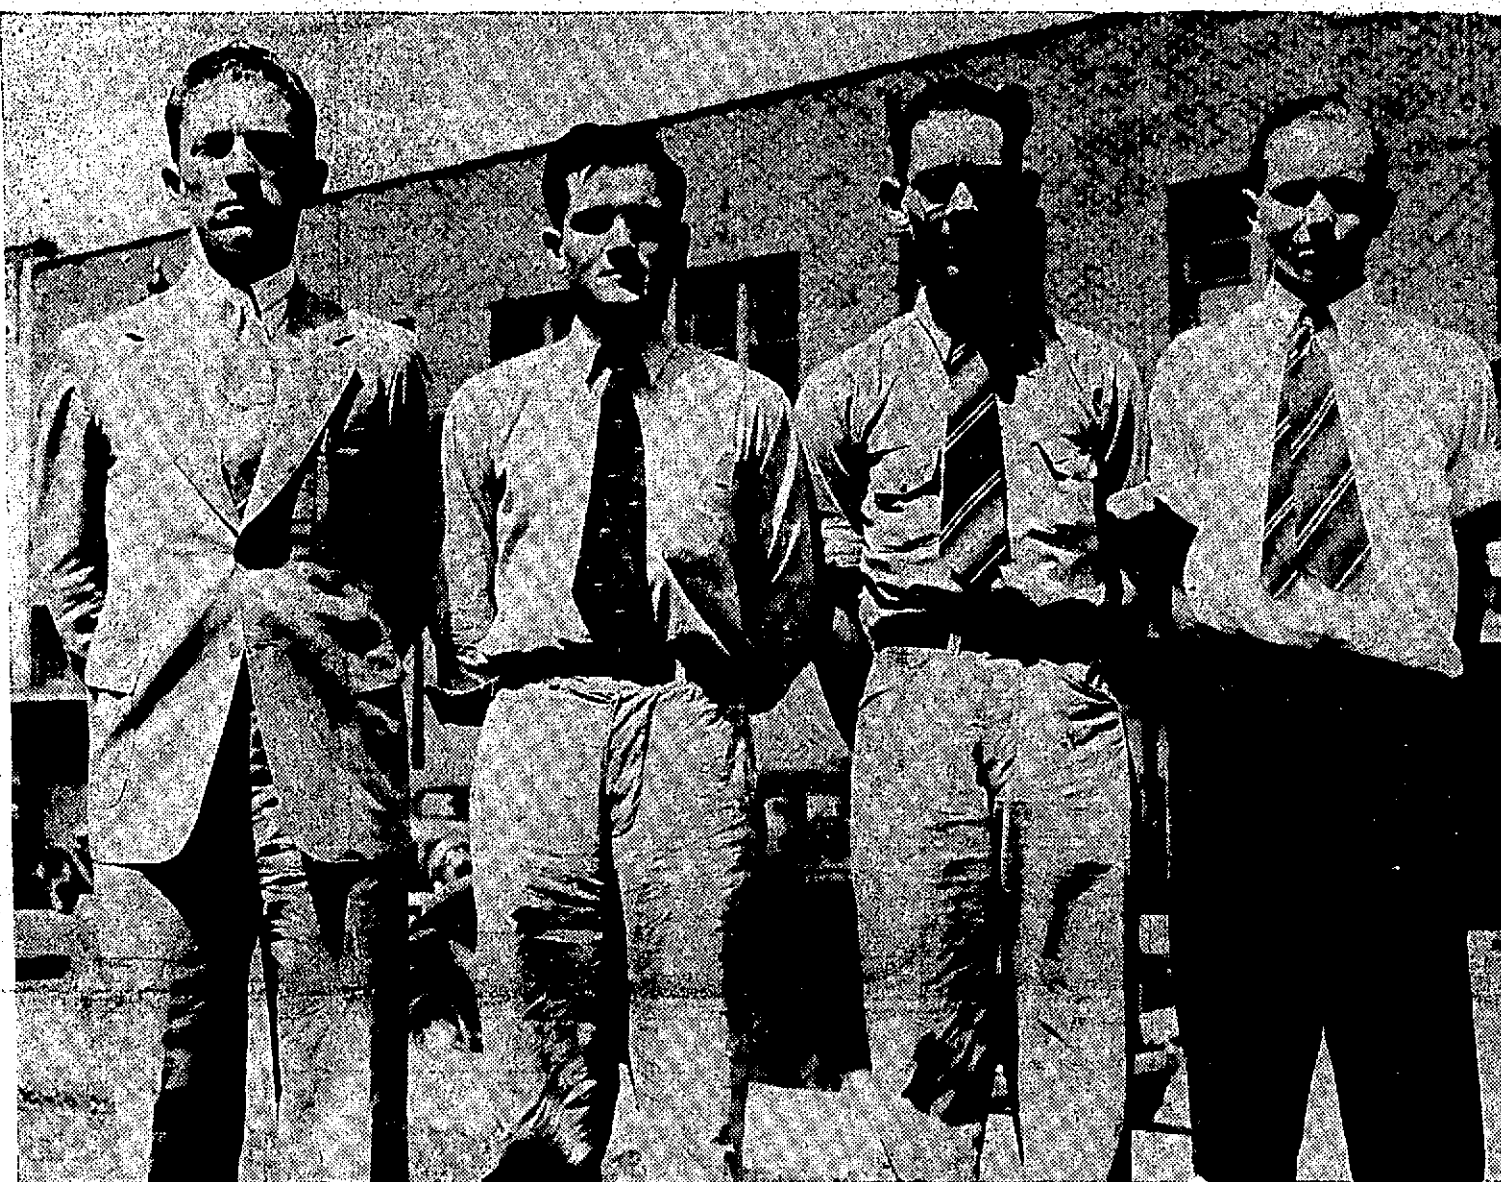

During his banking years he did accounting work for various automotive firms, attending a thorough knowledge of his present business line.

Mrs. Elmore is associated with her husband in the local business, and as soon as their daughter and son have finished school at Little Rock they will join the Elmore here.

The family are members of Second Baptist church, Little Rock.

The daughter, Miss Maudie Elmore, is graduating this year at Little Rock High School, is a member of the National Honor society, and of Quill & Scroll.

Billion for WPA Is Recommended

House Committee Would Allow Spending in 8 Months

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A $975,650,000 WPA appropriation, spendable in eight months if necessary was recommended Wednesday by the house appropriations committee which reported a lessening of "abuses in the relief administration."

The WPA appropriation, which the committee approved as President Roosevelt requested it, is part of an $1,111,754,819 emergency relief supply bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The committee sent the bill to the house floor.

Pilkinton Speaks on Value of Will

Imperative for Maker to Study Various State Laws

Speaking to the Hope Kiwanis Club at Hotel Barlow Wednesday State Senator James Pilkinton pointed out the privilege and duty of properly making a will.

Mr. Pilkinton stated that under the American system of government men held property as a privilege rather than a right. The speaker emphasized the necessity of investigating state laws regarding wills before drawing a will.

Wednesday's guests were: T. M. Rowe, Emmet, John P. Cox, Frank Douglas and Dr. Jim McKenzie.

Seasonal Labor on Farm Listed Here

Number of Openings Available at Employment Office

The local Arkansas State Employment Service office is completing arrangements to have available a sufficient number of agricultural laborers for seasonal farm work in this vicinity.

Seasonal farm workers will soon be in demand and the Employment office as usual, will be a clearing house for this employment activity. All those desiring this kind of work should contact the Employment office and leave their application, if they have not done so already.

It is expected that a great many of the workers will be picked up daily by trucks and taken to the various farms. The concentration points will be designated by the Employment Service.

This office now has a number of farm openings for a negro and his wife; also, larger negro families with children old enough to work. Each worker in the family is paid day wages and living quarters are furnished.

First Jury Trial in New Courthouse

Judge Bush Instructs Verdict for Mo. Pac.

In the first circuit court trial to be held in Hempstead county's new $200,000 courthouse Circuit Judge Dexter Bush Wednesday afternoon ordered an instructed verdict for the Missouri Pacific Railroad company in a personal injury suit brought against it by Horace Fullerton.

Fullerton claimed damage because he got a cinder in his eye while riding on the railroad.

The jury in the case—the first to sit in the new county courthouse—was as follows:

John Kent, W. W. Ellen, D. Huckabee, Buck Martin, Oscar Rider, E. E. Mobley, Lat Moses, K. B. Spears, J. J. Samuels, W. Williams, H. B. Barr and C. J. Weisenberger.

The court next proceeded with the case of Ruby Fay Alford Jones vs. Prescott & N. W. Railway Co., late Wednesday afternoon.

Vagabond Swede Tourist in Hope

Nels Holmes, 40, Chicago "Vagabond Swede," passed through Hope Tuesday on his way to Little Rock.

Holmes travels on a one and one-half horsepower scooter, and has visited 31 U. S. state capitals, Canada and Mexico City. Since leaving Michigan in 1939 he has traveled 28,000 miles, has made a canoe trip from Chicago to New Orleans and a bicycle trip from coast to coast.

In parting, Holmes stated that he gave up a job as commercial artist for a life that brings him closer to nature.

He is on a strict vegetable diet. "A meat diet makes people hot-headed and helps create war," he says.

Louisiana-Nevada Co. Aided by State

Utilities Commission Files Own Brief in Gas Appeal

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The State Utilities Commission asked the Arkansas Supreme Court Wednesday to recognize that the Louisiana-Nevada Transit company, fighting for the right to sell natural gas in southwest Arkansas, "subjects itself to state regulation on all of its business as a public utility."

The commission made this statement in a brief filed with the court in connection with the Louisiana-Nevada's appeal from a Pulaski circuit court decision revoking a commission order granting the company authority to compete in that section of the state with the Arkansas Louisiana Gas company.

The Arkansas Louisiana company, the utilities commission said, "has repeatedly gone on record that it does not respect the right of the state to regulate its industrial business nor does it purport to serve all those desiring service, but that it selected such customers."

The commission said in ruling on appeal that the court should be required to "pass upon the public utility philosophy adopted by the state, acting through this department."

It noted that the Louisiana-Nevada company rates "are much lower than any offered in 30 years of operating experience" of the Arkansas Louisiana company.

The commission added:

"The very existence of these lower rates will make existing industries more profitable, will attract new industries, and has already compelled the Arkansas Louisiana company to reduce its rates to meet this competition and threatened competition."

The appeal will be taken under submission by the court June 24.

Three in Race for Judge; Contests in Nevada County Too

THE LEGISLATURE

Two Two-Man Races—Hempstead, Nevada Tickets

The Hempstead and Nevada county tickets closed at noon Wednesday with spirited races assured for several offices in each county.

Expiration of the 90-day deadline before the August 13th primary election, brought the following developments:

A three-cornered fight for the office of Hempstead county judge. Four aspirants each for the Hempstead county offices of circuit clerk and county treasurer.

Two two-man races for Hempstead county's two posts in the State House of Representatives. Formerly the two posts were filled by the two candidates receiving the largest popular vote. Now, however, candidates must file for either No. 1 or No. 2 post.

Nevada Races

In Nevada county, there are five candidates for sheriff and collector, three for county clerk, and there will be a two-man race for state senator.

Nevada county formerly was grouped with Hempstead, but its senatorial district now groups it with Columbia county. Columbia had the right to nominate for the state senate last time, so Nevada county nominates this time, and former State Senator L. L. Mitchell and State Representative Edward B. Bryson will fight it out.

Hempstead Ticket

The Hempstead county ticket follows: Chancery judge—A. P. Steel. Prosecuting Attorney—Dick Hule. Sheriff and Collector—C. E. Baker. County Clerk—Frank J. Hill. Tax Assessor—Dewey Hendrix. Circuit Clerk—J. P. Byers, Cecil Weaver, E. R. Brown, Arthur C. Anderson.

County Judge—Fred A. Luck, L. F. Higginson, John L. Wilson. County Treasurer—Charles F. Reynerson, James I. Bowden, Mrs. Gladine B. Morris, J. Newt Pentecost. State Representative—No. 1, Hugh D. Clark and Talbot Field, Jr.; No. 2, J. E. Bearden and Royce Weisenberger.

Nevada Ticket

The Nevada county ticket follows: For Sheriff and Collector—F. L. "Red" Vandiver; Barton M. Saunders, W. E. (Ed) Cottingham; John A. (Red) Jarvis; Curtis D. Ward. For Representative—Leslie W. Buchanan.

For Circuit Clerk—W. O. (Owen) Waters. For Tax Assessor—Jesse Stockton. For County Judge—J. C. Woodul. For County and Probate Clerk—J. W. (Jesse) Baker; Howell (Buck) Young; Brad C. Dewoody; Cody W. Buller. For County Treasurer—Cald C. Mitchell.

For State Senator—Edward B. Bryson; L. L. Mitchell. County Surveyor—M. L. Lavender. County Coroner—Dr. Jack Harrell.

West Pointers Shy Off Money Spending Girls

By AMY PORTER

AP Feature Service Writer

If you are thinking about dating some good looking cadet officers, come June Week, just remember that—

When a West Point cadet takes a girl to dinner, the girl pays the check.

When a Naval Academy midshipman takes a girl to dinner, the midshipman pays the check—if it isn't too high.

So count your pennies and take your choice.

The service boys have beautiful uniforms—scantily equipped with pockets. Trousers pockets would mar the symmetry of the ensemble.

Yale and Princeton may buy fifth-row orchestra seats and dinner at the 21 club, but not the Army, nor the Navy.

June Week, high spot of the year at both service schools, is just around

HOW TO EAT
to BEAT THE HEAT
By ALICE H. SMITH
Nutritionist, Cleveland Health Council
Your Vitamins Are Just as Close As the Corner Grocery Store
The vitamins have sort of sneaked up on the country. A lot of people still don't know about them—where to look for them, at least. Vitamin therapy, for that matter, is still in its infancy.
But enough is known about vitamins to keep the average person pretty healthy. And you don't need to look very hard for them either. Vitamins are always on stock at your closest grocery.
A glance at the daily quota of essential vitamins will show you that.
If you want to be sure you get them all, include the following foods in your regular diet:
The equivalent of one pint of milk
daily (adult), one and one-half pints to two pints for children.
One serving citrus fruit or to-
low vegetables daily.
One serving potato daily.
One serving citrus fruit or tomato daily.
At least one other serving of fruit or vegetable daily.
One or more servings of whole grain cereal daily.
One serving of egg, meat or meat
substitute daily.
These foods, plus the food normally consumed to meet your bodily needs will furnish, according to our present knowledge of vitamins, all the A, B1, C, riboflavin and nicotinic acid necessary for the normal person. The adult requirement for Vitamin D is unknown. The child must secure his Vitamin D either from exposure to sun light or Vitamin D concentrate,
such as fish liver oil.
"But the pills?" some persons ask.
"It's so easy to get my vitamins in pills and then I don't have to worry any more." The answer to that is that you have to worry more because foods contain, in addition to vitamins, minerals, protein, and energy, all of which the body must have.
Moreover, it is more economical to have them in your food. If you can afford concentrates you can afford a good diet and if you can afford a good diet you don't need concentrates.
If you buy right you can lug home enough vitamins to keep the whole family healthy.
That's pretty important these first hot days.

Population of Stockholm, Sweden, is about 600,000 and 42 per cent are married persons.

CHAPTER XVII

SHEP GRANT heard Sherry's shouts—or so it seemed; for she distinctly saw him lift the reins—then his whip-arm rose—and fell. He jerked the reins up again. Pepper Boy shot out from the pack.

Suddenly, Sherry's heart seemed to stop. A horse, colors of yellow with blue stars, was sweeping forward—was even with Pepper Boy. It was Castanets.

Paul Wharton was muttering at Sherry's ear. "You, Mann—come on—Get going if you're ever going to!"

Mann, too, appeared to hear; he lashed out with his whip—once—twice. Red Soldier shot forward on the outside—Red Soldier swept past Castanets and Pepper Boy at the furlong pole.

A stunned silence fell upon the course, like a wave's retreat; then cheers broke out again, louder than ever. Paul was shouting:

"Look, honey—look! Pepper Boy's coming again—look—it's you who's winning—it's you!"

Leaning far over his mount's neck, Shep Grant was putting up one of his powerful finishes. His hands were shooting forward with the horse's stride—were showing against Pepper Boy's neck—they were passing Red Soldier—Mann was lashing out with his whip, but Red Soldier had nothing more to give—while Pepper Boy's stride lengthened—he was tearing up the ground.

Pepper Boy went under the wire—winner by a full length. Castanets was second—the tiring Red Soldier third.

"PAUL—Paul, dear, I won!" Sherry cried. "You don't mind, do you?"

"Mind? I'm happy for you!"

"I know, but you were trying so hard—and you gave me every advantage—even advised a heavy rider."

"Hush!" She saw the light of joy in his eyes. "Come on—you've got to lead the winner in!"

She stopped. "I'm not going to face all this alone—"

"Hush! Don't you hear the loud speaker?" It was blaring:

"Will Miss Sheridan . . . Bond please come forward and lead her!"

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD
By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

Powell and Loy in Love Again but Not for Long if Myrna Scrambles Many More Eggs on His Noggin

Bill Porter is battling for Paul Harrison while the NEA columnist vacations.

By BILL PORTER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD—Bill Powell and Myrna Loy are back together in "I Love You Again." Powell is looking healthy and as debonair as ever. But his health and his elegance are going to take quite a beating before the picture is finished.

When the story opens Powell is a fuddy-duddy pottery salesman who makes a hobby of taxidermy. On a buying trip to New York he is hit over the head by a gambler and as a result loses his memory. When he recovers he finds himself among gamblers and confidence men and becomes one of them. He gets in a fight is knocked down again and receives a black eye.

Then he meets Myrna Loy and they fall in love. In one of their love spats, Miss Loy wops Powell over the noggin with a plate full of scrambled eggs. He's again laid out.

None of these kayoes restores his memory, but along comes Frank McHugh and punches Powell in the nose. He falls again, striking his head on a door. He regains his memory and with it his stuffy personality.

Myrna Loy, who has fallen in love with Powell the confidence man and gambler, is so disgusted when she finds out he likes to dust pottery and stuff owls that she comes to him over the head again with one of his own vases as the picture ends.

Got English Diction and Gangster's Role

Three years ago John McGuire walked on a 20th-Fox contract because they wanted him to change his American speech for more sophisticated English diction. So he went to New York and appeared in "Knights of Song" in the role of a young Englishman. Then he played George Bernard Shaw as a young man. He did other English plays, finally ending with the role of a smoothy in "Shadow and Substance."

McGuire returned to Hollywood recently replete with Oxford accent and tried again to get into pictures. He did, in the role of a mug who talks out of the side of his mouth in "Street of Memories."

On the 20th-Fox back lot Jack Oakie was learning to plow a field. As a retired vaudeville in "Young People" Oakie was supposed to be putting his hand to the plow for the first time.

"All you have to do is hang onto these handles and say 'gee-up,' said he horse expert. "But don't shout at the horse."

"Gee-up," said Oakie in a weak, frightened voice. Nothing happened. The horse still stood looking at him.

"All right, we'll shoot it," said winner in? Miss Sheridan Bond, please—make way for Miss Bond, owner of the winner of the Kentucky Derby!"

"And that means you, my dear! They think you're in the boxes—"

"And I'm out here—and scared to death. I simply can't go out there alone, Paul!"

"But, honey, you're not alone!"

"Then say something—quick!"

Her lips were trembling—her eyes were moist. Beyond them was the track: a little black horse with a scarlet and purple-clad rider was coming up to the line. Seventy-five thousands persons were looking at that horse—

"Sherry, I love you!"

"Say it again!" she whispered.

His arms were about her; her face was buried in his shoulder. "Look up, darling!"

"Miss Sheridan Bond — Miss Bond—please! Make way for Miss Bond."

"Oh, darn it, let 'em wait." Sherry raised her face. Paul Wharton smiled shyly, then quickly his lips were on hers—in a long, cool caress of sheltering love.

Someone was speaking in breathless tones—someone small and black—alongside them. It was Elijah, the exercise boy. "Miss Sherry—didn't you know it?"

"Know what, Elijah?" she managed to say, trying to hide her confusion.

"You done win the Derby, Miss Sherry."

"Come on, Paul." Now she had his arm, and together they ran toward the gate leading to the track. "I'm going to give Shep—10 per cent of the purse—for expenses—he's still such a boy—but he'll grow up—some day—"

SHERY found herself on the track—alone. Sam was leading the colt toward her. Shep Grant was lifting his whip in salute. He leaned over and whispered, "Told you nothing to worry about!" She flashed him a smile.

"Here be yo' winner, Miss Sherry," Sam, bursting with joy, thrust the reins into her hands. "Thank you, Sam." She looked up, "A great ride, Shep!"

The band was playing the Triumphant March. She was leading Pepper Boy into the winner's circle—a lot of fenced-off grass, reserved the entire year for this single moment. Garlands of flowers were being thrust into her arms—were being draped over Pepper Boy's withers—still cameras were clicking and movie cameras were trained upon her.

Two familiar and proud faces popped out of the crowd: Uncle Willie and Cousin Ted. The school teacher was seeing life at last. . . . and now, Miss Bond—ladies and gentlemen of America—will tell you how it feels to win America's greatest horse race. Talk to America, Miss Sheridan Bond!"

It was great—and gorgeous—and wonderful—and thrilling—and so terribly, terribly lonely. Where was he—where was Paul? He had vanished from the earth—and this triumphant moment was empty without him.

Paul had fought to save her colt when she foolishly entered him in that claiming race—Paul had tried to advise her—he had pointed out the advantage of riding live weight on her colt—Paul had kept her rider from getting drunk this Derby morning—she owed everything to him.

Now she knew that she had loved him always; he was manly and strong and unselfish. Shep Grant was just a charming, irresponsible boy—who might some day grow up. Shep would be a pal, never a husband.

Sherry was speaking into the microphone, speaking from the heart: "I know I won—but it was the advice of a rival, Paul Wharton, that caused me to win. He was trying to gild me, but he wouldn't take advantage—He's a great sportsman, and—"

It was just as well the cheers of the crowd drowned her next words. . . . Now Paul Wharton appeared from nowhere, and escorted her across the track into the clubhouse. Here a telegraph messenger thrust an envelope into her hands. "Come in a second ago, Miss Bond," he grinned.

"Read it aloud, Paul," she said. He read:

"To the Blue-eyed Owner of the Derby Winner: Congratulations and thanks. Entire squad bet early on Pepper Boy at good odds and we won plenty. You are a swell thoroughbred yourself and you told the truth. Telegraph when you return and entire squad will escort you."

"Respectfully, "Motorcycle Patrolman McGinnis."

"Oh," Sherry beamed, recalling the early-morning dash across Manhattan behind the red-haired cop.

"Don't you think, Paul," she said, smiling through the mist in her eyes, "that a motorcycle escort would be simply swell when we get married?"

THE END

Oakie. He plowed all afternoon and when the company wound up for the day he displayed a couple of blistered hands to Dwan. Dwan looked at the blisters and burst out laughing. "Hey Ed," he shouted to Edward Cronjager, the cameraman, "Take a close-up of Jack's hands. It's just what we need to finish the scene."

Grab-Bag

"Marrigae makes me think of a quick lunch restaurant at noon time." "Why so?"

"Well, one simply grabs something that looks good and pays for it later on."

The District of Columbia was established under the authority and direction of acts of Congress approved July 16, 1790.

War in Belgium Is an Old Story

Generals Picked Belgium From Caesar to Hitler

AP Feature Service

It was no accident that the soldier poet wrote about the poppies of Flanders fields.

Those fields and all the lowland plains have been a battleground for the nations of western and of central Europe since time immemorial.

The reason simply is that it's the best spot on the western front for armies to get at each other. Rough terrain makes the upper Rhineland more difficult.

When Caesar blitzkrieged Gaul 2,000 years ago he called the Belgae the bravest of the tribesmen.

Even then Germanic tribes were pressing against the Gauls on these plains. Later German invaders, upon the breakdown of Roman power, drove through Belgium.

In the Middle Ages the populous, prosperous lowlands were seized by the dukes of Normandy, and in 1516 they were subjected to the Hapsburg emperor, Charles V. Spanish tyranny brought about the revolution that gave the Netherlands freedom, but left Belgium under Spanish or Austrian control until the French Revolution.

Meantime Louis XIV sought to give France its "natural boundaries" by expanding to the Rhine. England led a coalition of Austria, Holland and the Germanic states against him.

and the grandiose schemes of France's grand monarch were drowned in blood shed on Flanders fields.

For centuries England had had a special interest in the lowlands because it was there that her wool was manufactured into fine cloth. And about this time it became evident England would never agree voluntarily to the domination of the lowlands by a major power.

So when Napoleon annexed this territory to France in 1801, the loss had a war on his hands. The last shot was fired at Waterloo, in Belgium.

Belgium was then united willy-nilly to Holland. Soon she revolted and set up independently. Thiercupon, Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia and Russia signed a treaty recognizing her as a "perpetually neutral" state.

That treaty held good in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, but by the time the World War rolled around German strategists had evolved the Schlieffen plan. It proposed the defeat of France by an end run through the lowlands. Germany carried it out to the extent of overrunning Belgium, but bogged down in the muddy Flanders fields.

Following its World War experience with a scrap of treaty paper, Belgium abandoned guaranteed neutrality in favor of defensive alliances. After Hitler, however, she renounced these treaties in the hope that no power could point a finger at her as lacking in neutrality and good intentions.

But once more blood flows on Flanders fields.

Within two years after the discovery of gold in California in 1848 more than 80,000 persons entered the state.

Quarrel May Help F.D.R. to Decide

The Old Taft-Roosevelt Quarrel Is Repeated

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON — Those proverbial small towns where gossip flows over the back fence with the speed of radio, are now new twists and tangles as the word spreads that a quarrel between the two presidents is being repeated.

Within the space of a few hours I have heard "authentic" reports of a super-super munitions lobby's control of congress; a Nazi Trojan horse scheme to sabotage upper-crust British politics; and an elaborate plan to blow up the Panama canal by a suicide crew, sailing an apparently harmless fishing smack.

Also that Mrs. J. Wentworth Traveler has pawned the crown jewels to finance the American Bolshevik revolution; Senator Doakes is the real ruler of the Christian Front; and our government is really controlled in the drawing rooms by the American equivalent of the Cliven set.

Also that a prominent Hollywood actor who frequently portrays historical characters is America's No. 1 Communist; and Shirley Temple is a Japanese spy.

Such things may seem far-fetched but they are no more fantastic than some of the tales that wag their way into the best Washington circles. It takes more than a couple of pinches of salt to catch facts in Washington and a gent has to be pretty sly to keep his nose for news from slipping down to a neck for noose.

Duty vs. Politics
Still, a correspondent is neglecting his readers if he doesn't sift this chaff. The trouble is that governments are run through politics and politics mean axes to grind. Sometimes the grinding constitutes misrepresentation of facts. Sometimes it's for the public's good; sometimes it's the public's headache.

Occasionally, the Washington commentator can apply his secret formula and turn up a little pure gold—but more often he has to deliver crushed ore in bulk, with the warning: "DANGER. This may be dynamite!" or "Here it is, take it or leave it."

A good many years ago, William Howard Taft and Teddy Roosevelt, old friends politically and personally, parted ways. Their quarrel was important to Washington and vital to the history of politics. Yet no commentator, no historian has been able to ferret out the facts. And the only two men who KNEW now are dead. History repeated itself when FDR and Al Smith drifted apart. In spite of all the able journalistic hunkies who are here to mine the news, the story behind that chapter may never be more than a guesser's guess unless the two principals tell the story as it was.

About That Third Term
"All this is no preamble to a story worth recording—at present moment anyway—but here's a modern example. An anti-administration Democrat whose sincerity is not in doubt went to some logical lengths to explain, "but not for quotes," under what circumstances President Roosevelt would run for a third term.
He KNEW, he said—never mind how—that the President had made up his mind to run, but only if the Republicans nominated Dewey. The President felt, said my informant, that Dewey might develop into the most effective vote-getter the GOP could put forward so effective in fact that he, Roosevelt, might be the only Democratic candidate who could defeat him.

Ergo, to save the New Deal ideology and foreign policy from the uncertainties of an administration headed by a youthful, inexperienced, untired executive, the President would run again. All this, my friend emphatically pointed out, was no reflection on Mr. Dewey, but rather a compliment that only he should be worthy of a third-term scrap.
Well, anyway you see what I mean. Do you wanna trade jobs?

Modern Graduates Makes Own Meads

Copy Jewelry Ideas From South American Indians

The 1940 sweet girl graduate is borrowing jewelry ideas from the South American Indians. And like the Indians, she makes some of the jewelry herself. She's copying the Indian in unusual color combinations, in odd designs and in getting exotic ornamentation out of ordinary things like peanuts, beans, safety pins. She even fashions a gay necklace of cardboard, plus beads she molds out of wax.

She has several ways of preserving a nut or bean. (They need a coating or they're likely to sprout!) She shells each nut or covers it with sealing wax. She can run a lot of dried peas up on a string, then dip the whole string into clear nail polish. But she'll have to wipe edges the same way she smooths polish on her nails.
To make beads out of wax, you need the following tools. Knitting needle, candle (or alcohol burner), glass of cold water, heavy sewing needle, linen thread, wire and 36 inches of round elastic.

Here's how to make round beads of wax: Heating the knitting needle two inches from one end, press it into a small piece of wax, putting a second piece of wax on top, putting the needle in the flame. The wax is cooled, then moulded with fingers. Then to get rid of the marks your fingers leave on the bead, just pass it quickly through the flame, then dunk it into cold water.
Your bead is still on the needle. Now, wipe off the water, then heat the needle in front of and behind the bead, but don't heat the bead. Now, while the needle is hot, slip the bead off and drop it into cold water. For the necklace around the girl's neck in the illustration, 13 strings of round beads are required, with one square bead for the end of each string. Twenty-six squares of cardboard must be waxed, one cardboard square to be strung on either side of each square bead.

Now make a large knot at the end of a doubled linen thread and string the beads thus: a cardboard square, one square bead, another cardboard square plus the other beads. The center string is 3 1/2 inches long with six strings on each side graduating to 2 1/2 inches. Fasten the strings to gold chain and fasten it with a bow of narrow velvet ribbon.

Class Invitations Are Only Notices

Graduate Invitations No Longer Demand Gifts

AP Feature Service
Sometime in recent years a lot of boys and girls picked up the notion that sending invitations to their graduations programs was asking for a gift. Perhaps it's part of youth's growing independence.

Whatever the cause, it's up to parents to persuade them that graduation invitations are merely notifications to friends that the parents have a child who is getting a diploma—a matter of family pride. And a graduation invitation no longer demands (if it ever did) a gift. Sometimes good friends of the parent or the graduate do show acknowledgement with a gift or a congratulatory message. That's a personal matter. Attending the exercises or offering congratulations is considered sufficient, however.

And, you parents. Your child really wants you to see him get his diploma, even though he may assume a do not-care attitude. That's family pride, too. Parents should attend his commencement. And when they get to the school, they should be prepared to do the things the graduate has planned for them. He wants mother to admire the wishy grand wants dad's O. K. on the new physics lab. Be at the auditorium on time, even a little early. Remember to stand up while the graduating class files in, and again when the class leaves. It's their day and no one should spoil it by dashing out in the midst of the exercises.

After the exercises, give your son or daughter plenty of time for farewells to classmates. They are parting from friends they may never see again.

Stinnett Warns Of Locust Plague

17 Year Old Locust Plague Coming Again This Year

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON—Even a bug can be a victim of propaganda. Seventeen-year locusts, especially.
Puritan ministers started the anti-17-year locust propaganda 300 years ago. What the Massachusetts preachers said about the insect troubadours was character assassination, no less. The cicadas still haven't lived it down. It seems the Puritan farmers got scared when the ground practically exploded and billions of insects came forth. They'd never seen anything like that in England.
It was a swell opportunity for the ministers to throw a little fear into the backbones. So they announced that the insects were locusts. It was another visitation, they preached, like the plague of locusts that laid waste Egypt in Biblical times.
Locusts Aren't Locusts
The Puritan theologians were nature-faking. Seventeen-year locusts aren't locusts at all. They're periodic cicadas, no relation to the voracious insects of the Bible. But the preachers poured it on, and the bad name stuck.

Now a 17-year locust 'plague' is coming again this year, the biggest since 1923. Uncle Sam's entomologists say there's no cause for alarm. Adult cicadas don't eat at all. They do make the wood-lots ring when several million get in tune at once, but who'd begrudge a cicada his brief few weeks of song after waiting patiently for his turn for 17 years?

As bugs go, cicadas are high-type citizens. They aren't major pests, and their life cycle is the most interesting in bugdom. For instance:

The eggs are polite, and wait their turn to be hatched. The first egg laid hatches first, and so on. A female lays about 500 eggs in bark. It doesn't hurt older trees, and rarely injures younger ones.

The hatched larvae drop to the ground, and burrow in for 17 years in a Rip Van Winkle. Nobody knows why it takes 'em so long to develop. Somehow, after 17 years in a solitary burrow, they can tell to the hour when the other pupae are about to emerge. All the males come out one night, the females several nights later.

Mute in Their Legs
Their "digging clothes" in which they spent 17 years split down the back when they emerge. The cicadas steps out in a milk-white dandruff, complete with gauze wings. They turn darker in an hour. Then they have black bodies, orange legs, and big, red eyes.

After that, there's one brief round of song—but only for the males. They sing choruses in the top branches of a tree, solos in the lower branches, by rubbing their wings on hollow sound boxes on their bodies.

Nazis Driven Back

As the Nazi conquest of Holland hammered home to Britain her own exposure to aerial raiders.

Machine gun fire sounded Wednesday near the mouth of the Humber river, along the English east coast.

A Berlin broadcast heard here Wednesday sharpened Britain's anxiety and spurred recruiting of a new home front army to fight possible invasion by Nazi parachute troops.

"German planes already are within easy reach of the important English port of Harwich," the German announcer warned. "More than that, they have the bases for a direct attack against the whole of England."

In this age of modern warfare the insularity of the British isles has ended. "The air ministry said Britain's air force had 'destroyed permanent bridges and two pontoon bridges, and with anti-aircraft guns had brought down 15 German planes in a terrific battle near Sedan.'"

It acknowledged the loss of 35 British planes.

It was reported here German motorized troops were pouring into the Hague.

Swiss Mobilized
BERN—(AP)—Switzerland's mobilization is complete, and "All troops occupy the positions which have been assigned to them," the federal council and high command announced in a joint communique Wednesday.

"These positions, on all our frontiers, are held by powerful armed forces," the communique said.

Holland Surrenders
BERLIN—(AP)—Germany's war machine crushed The Netherlands Tuesday night and beat a bloody path along World war battlefields through Belgium to the ramparts of France. Capitulation of Holland, with the exception of the south-western province of Zeeland, after five days of blitzkrieg, was hailed by the Germans as "a unique military achievement."

German authorities said resistance continued in Zeeland, blaming skepticism of the local Dutch commander, but said "negotiations are being conducted" to end hostilities there.

The German high command said surrender of Rotterdam, once-great Netherlands seaport, had preserved it from destruction by dive bombers and armored forces. Rotterdam is within the huddle of the "Holland fortress" which The Netherlands had counted upon defending at all costs.

The Germans announced sinking by aircraft of two enemy cruisers and a destroyer off the Dutch coast and the firing of two other ships and damage of yet another.

In north Belgium, the German command announced, "armored units have reached Ligny, historic battleground of 1815, in pursuit of the retreating enemy."

Partly the Germans said the retreating Belgians, French and English had been thrown back at the river Geffe in the direction of Loewen and Wavre.

Battle of Sedan
PARIS—(AP)—The armies of Germany and France struggled again

The bureau of entomology finds that cicadas are homebodies, who stick close to their own localities. A brood emerges somewhere every year, but is restricted to a definite area.
The American broods of cicadas have been numbered. This year's crop is Brood 14. It is the largest and most widely distributed. The 1910 17-year locusts are spread from Cape Cod to Illinois. Brood 10, which is due again in 1952, is next largest.
That's the not-very scary low-down on "17-year locusts" who are going to visit us in a "plague" this summer. Too bad they got the wrong kind of publicity, back there in 1634, isn't it?

the corner, and some of the country's most eligible girls are wheeling good-sized checks out of their parents to foot the bill for a week's stay at Annapolis or the Point.

Navy plebes (freshmen) get $2 a month spending money; youngsters, $1; second classmen, $0; and first classmen, $10. The West Pointer gets no spending money at all. Somebody back around 1800 decided it wouldn't be democratic to allow cadets to spend anything.

It's Like This

So a cadet's drag must pay her bill at the Point's fairly expensive Thayer Hotel. She must buy her cadet dinner and cigarettes. If she wants flowers to wear to the hop, she must buy those too.

A midshipman can do better by his date, because he can use money from home. A cadet is forbidden to get money from home.

This year the Point's superintendent, Erig. Gen. J. L. Benedict, loosened up a little bit. First classmen, the graduating class, are allowed some spending money—whatever they've been able to save during the last three months of the year from their $75 a month army pay. They can't save much, because all expenses—uniforms, books, excess food—are first deducted.

Kissing Question

But the Army is one up on the Navy when it comes to week-end leaves. First classmen at the Point get eight week-ends in New York (with perhaps as much as $10 to throw away on amusement. Up till this year midshipmen weren't allowed to leave Annapolis at all. But Rear Admiral W. Brown, commander, has granted a special dispensation, permitting the graduating class to spend two week-ends in May at Baltimore or Washington.

It remains to be seen whether Com-be governor," he said. "I have made this statement to many friends who have written and to others who have personally solicited me to seek the office. I am grateful to all of them for this manifestation of their continued confidence and friendship."

"However, it is my ambition to represent my state as senator in the national Congress where my training and past experience have fitted me for the best public service of which I am capable."

"Until now I have withheld making any public announcement of my intentions because of the peculiar and uncertain political situation and because I did not want to make a final decision without a full consideration of all conditions and developments. This I have done with the counsel of many friends for the move of the state."

"In the great crisis now confronting the world and civilization it behooves all of us to support wholeheartedly the president, his cabinet and the Congress in their profound hope and efforts to preserve our democracy and keep our nation at peace. Whether I shall ever hold public office again, I shall always be grateful for the loyalty and support of my friends, and am ready and available for any service or duty I can perform for my country."

ing the next two years."

Several friends commented on the possibility of his active support being given one candidate, but Mr. McClellan declined to discuss the matter.

The Camden lawyer said he intends to make another race for the United States Senate "at some time in the future." He was defeated by Senator Hattie W. Caraway in 1938.

Nazi Army Gets First Real Test

Lowland Invasion Is Prelude to Great Britain

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
AP Feature Service Military Writer

WASHINGTON.—The Nazis' whirlwind invasion of the low countries is the prelude to an attempted knock-out punch at Great Britain.

At last the long-delayed "bid for quick victory" and perhaps the dreaded "total war" is under way. If the Germans can establish and maintain their stronghold on the Dutch coast, they will have a pivot point at the heart of England. Huge sprawling London is only 45 minutes bombing time from The Hague.

Meanwhile the Nazi military machine is to get its first major test against big league military opposition—large unit of the tuned up French army.

They Planned It So

The Germans are using the cream of their army. Seventy divisions, upwards of 800,000 front line soldiers, have been massed on the Belgian-Dutch borders. Every detail of their operations certainly was worked out with traditional German military thoroughness.

The Netherlands and Belgium have been Germany's "perferred" routes of attack on Britain and France since long before World war days. The Nazis know practically every foot of the terrain. Strategic railways and highways can rapidly pour troops into the low countries.

On the other side, the French high command has worked for years to perfect plans of countering a German invasion via Belgium or Holland.

When the war started last September, the French began extending and strengthening the Maginot line along the Belgian border. That part of France's famed defense wall probably is not as "impenetrable" as the sections directly facing Germany. A "break through" in the weaker section may be a part of the Germans' grand offensive, providing their drive through Belgium is not permanently stalled.

A Matter of Time

Allied Generalissimo Gamelin should be able to put French and British forces in Belgium strong enough to give the invaders a fight of World-war proportions and still keep large bodies of troops in France.

Before the lightning invasion of the low countries military observers wondered why the Germans made so little use of their vaunted air force. Perhaps they were building it up for "the one big offensive."

The Germans probably will have a preponderance in air strength for the lowlands struggle. On the other hand their gasoline supplies may not be adequate for a prolonged "all out war." The Germans as usual seem to have the jump but if the British and French "can take it" for a few months without suffering defeat, the tide can slowly turn the other way just as it did in 1918.

Travelers Whip League Leaders

Only the Fifth Defeat for the Nashville Club

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Pitcher Marvin Ulrich made Greek George hit into a double play with the bases full in the ninth inning and the Little Rock Travelers nosed out the league-leading Nashville Vols, 6 to 5, in a thriller here Tuesday night. It was only the fifth defeat suffered by Larry Gilbert's club this season.

Ulrich, who pitched only to one batter, was the second hurler used in the inning by Manager Herb Brett and the fourth in the game. Jim Prendergast, credited with the victory, was knocked out in the eighth inning. Prendergast was replaced by Hank Harris who stopped the Vols after they registered their fourth run. Harris lost control in the ninth. He walked Pinch-Hitter Feldman and was removed after throwing two balls to Mihalie. Wilfried LeFebvre stepped in, completed the job of passing Mihalie and then gave Tatum a free ticket, filling the bases. Moser's single to right scored Feldman and the bases still were full.

Sieling Starts Double Play
"Soco" Rocco grounded to Leroy Schalk who threw to Rensa nipped Mihalie at the plate. Ulrich followed LeFebvre and George grounded to Hal Sieling who started the double play ending the game.

Fashion Parades Begins at Races

American Women are Trying Out French Ideas

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

The people who make and sell clothes for women long have been lamenting the lack of fashion interest at American sports events.

So this spring they are trying out the French idea of tying up fashions with horse racing.

At the opening of the spring meeting at Belmont Park, horses had to share honors with two dozen mannikins, dressed in the smartest summer costumes New York stores could whip up for the occasion.

Before the races, the mannikins appeared at the nearby Turf and Field Club in the Fashion Stakes Fashion Show, so named after the Fashion Stakes race, an annual Belmont event for fillies. At the tracks, the mannikins were conspicuous in a box to themselves. Between races they promenaded around the paddock.

Decidedly French! Remember the pictures of Longchamps Prix de Paris? They showed more women than horses—women in trailing chiffons and garden party hats.

Nobody knows what it will be like this year, but in the past, the Grand Prix, run late in June, was a big fashion event where couturiers triumphingly introduced new creations. A good design a la say, Schiaparelli, got as much attention as the horse that won the Grand Prix.

The Belmont crowd, accustomed to taking its horses racing, wasn't breathless at the sight of Fashion on Parade. But the mannikins did make heads turn. And women said, "I'd like to have that little blue crepe."

The little blue crepe with a jacket of imported white daisy print, was a Germaine Montell design, shown with a white hat and veil, a white bag, white gloves.

The fashion offerings were a bit on the dressy side, more formal than the down-to-earth sports clothes American women ordinarily wear when they go to races or tennis matches or ball games. Belmont draws a smart crowd, but the women in the stands weren't as dressed up as the mannikins. Most of them wore comfortable jackets and skirts, and the plainest of sports frocks.

Whether you cast your vote for plain or fancy dressing at sports events, you'd like the clothes displayed. They included fine examples of the "one good town costume" every woman likes to have in her summer wardrobe.

A nice bolero costume of green and white print had crisp white linen collars and cuffs. It was dressed up with a hat made entirely of white roses.

A Molyneux costume offered flat-tery in a pink and beige print jacket and dress, with a full-pleated skirt, and silver buttons down the front of the jacket. Perfect for a city summer.

A specially designed Belmont Park blue-and-white print suit was topped with a just-of-the-clipper white straw hat with blue ribbon streamers.

The entire showing fluttered with veils and flowers and graceful swirling skirts, as if for wearing trailing gowns to the baseball park. In any case, the clothes were so pretty, even Long-champs would be proud to claim them.

According to manufacturers, the life of a good tire is about 20,000 miles.

"Discovered"

LARAMIE, Wyo.—(P)—Workmen on the University of Wyoming campus, digging excavations for a new building, uncovered three graves of pioneers who were buried more than a half century ago.

Then their shovels struck a fourth coffin. Before a dozen more spades of earth were turned a crowd of over 200 was watching.

Gently the workmen scraped away the soil from the rotting boards.

Suddenly the decrepit lid lifted. Out stepped a masked figure, clad in black coat, heavy boots and brown fur cap. On his back was this sign: "I've waited 50 years for the Varsity Show."

Cops unsnarled the traffic jam and learned it was a publicity gag for a show the seniors were staging.

The "corps" had been planted a half hour before the workmen "discovered" it.
